

the fates: now we are three

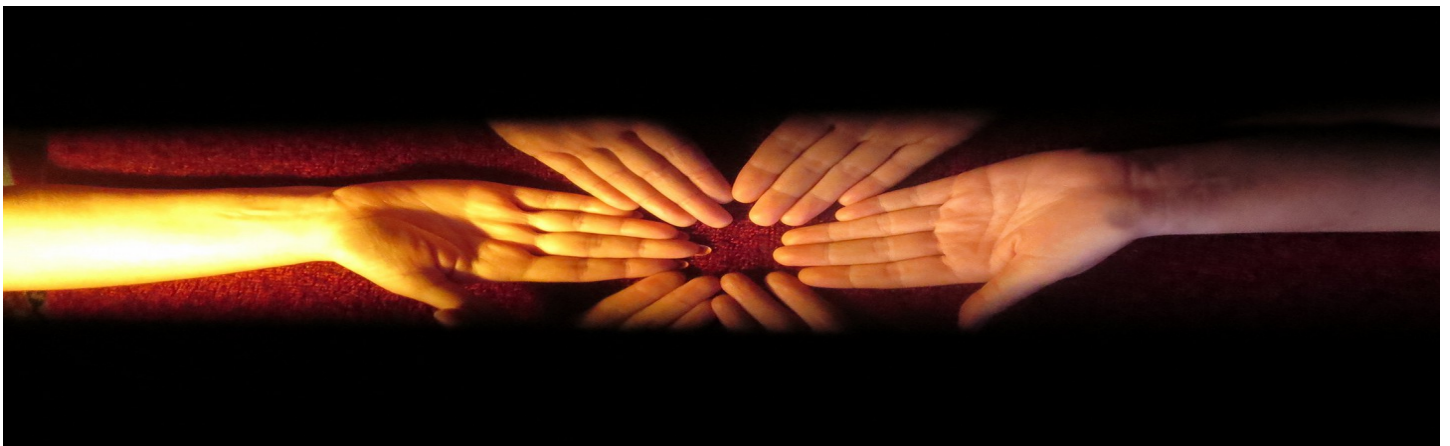

The Fates are Bay Whitaker, Sue Cain and Tegwen Roberts. We are based in Sheffield, UK and have been singing together since 2005. Originally a quartet (formed as an a-cappella ceilidh band) we became a three-piece in 2013. Now we are three is our first album as a trio.

We are all experienced writers and performers in our own right, with very different voices and styles, which come together in a complex and layered sound that embraces our different influences.

We bring our own original take to traditional music, merging unaccompanied traditional songs with newly penned material. Our arrangements segue between lush, uncompromising harmonies and unexpected discord, blended with precision and humour. We love anything with a good rhythm and we can't resist a jig.

We regularly host gigs and sessions, and we love to sing in unusual and interesting spaces. We are as much at home performing on a festival stage or in a folk club, as singing in the back room of a pub or enjoying the acoustics of an abandoned railway tunnel. We're happiest when singing with friends, old and new.

Previous gigs include; Hull Folk Festival, Sheffield Sessions Festival, L'Eroica, The Cumberland Arms, Newcastle, and the White Horse Folk Club, Beverley.
